The Science of achieving a positive staffroom – it's all about a strong team

There is a science to happiness to work. There is strong evidence that supports particular strategies at the expense of others. The good news is that pay is at number 5 when it comes to things employers can do to motivate and engage their employees. This session will look at a range of options including job design, incentives, employee perks and benefits and help you decide the best strategy for your business.
